

OA reflection of the degree of democracy in a society is the ability of the State to consistently enforce the rule of law and the principles of good governance. Although the Constitution, laws and numerous international documents ratified by Macedonia provide for a reliable and fair legal framework, a key problem is the inconsistent compliance with the laws and their enforcement. There are many factors for this, but the main ones include corruption, weak and politicized public administration, and ineffective judicial institutions. Despite this obvious and frequently pointed out factors, the non-systematic participation of the citizens (and civil organizations) in the creation of public policies, especially in policies that determine the main social priorities. Additional, there is a frequent demand from Republic of Macedonia to comply the rule of law with the European standards, and corruption to be thoroughly investigated in order to be adequately prevented and suppressed.

The overall program goal is democratic Macedonia free of corruption.

The specific program objective is to inform and educate CSOs and citizens on how to hold State institutions accountable thus contribute to increasing their integrity.

The program target group is the entire population in Macedonia. Direct users are the civil society organizations from Macedonia and countries from the region (Southeast Europe), state administration bodies, media and the public. The target area is the whole territory of republic of Macedonia, and part of the activities have regional character, i.e. target countries from Western Balkans and Turkey.

Expected program results are:

1. Conducted in-depth analysis of the state of affairs and dynamics regarding corruption;
